Contemporary painter Verona Sorensen who has been featured in several articles here, has embarked on a new and timely endeavour. While her specialty has been encaustic painting, she is also an accomplished sketcher.

As we slowly emerge from COVID-19 lockdowns and embrace the great outdoors, she has commenced a series of three-hour sketching walkabouts in such areas as Old Montreal and near the Atwater Market and the Canal, with equipment and technical tips provided. Jarry Park and Westmount Park are possible future sites, depending on demand.

The excursions – generally on Wednesdays, Saturdays and Sundays – begin on July 18 and will be offered until late October.

No prior experience is necessary. A chance to try your hand while developing “seeing” instead of merely “looking.”

Sorensen’s sketching walk can be booked on the Airbnb Experience platform and if further information is needed you can contact Verona at veronasorensen@gmail.com
