A way of life that evolved into a business

Jacques Billaudeau arrived in Quebec on June 23, 1652 on board a vessel from France. Born in Pioussay in Poitou, he is the ancestor of all the Bilodeaus in Canada. And our ancestor had a guilty pleasure: he loved to hunt and fish. This sideline distracted him from farm work and the clearing of his plot of land on Île d'Orléans, but it also provided some much-appreciated extra income. In 1681, he owned a gun, thirty cattle and forty acres of land.

Jacques, along with his son and two other associates, formed a partnership of trappers to fish and hunt in the Seigneurie de la rivière de la Madeleine. In exchange for the right to trap, the seigneur requested that they purchase or build a suitable boat for the purpose of their enterprise, whereby he would pay each of them the sum of ten pounds a year. The tradition continues and Hollywood takes note

The founder of the present company, Mario Bilodeau, a true nature enthusiast, began his career in 1985 working in the fur trade. In 1997 he associated with Marcel Laplante and surrounded himself with a creative and dynamic team that shares common values of quality, respect, integrity and affordability. “Over the years, our reputation has been built on the quality of our products and our after-sales service. We sell our products across Canada and we also export to over ten countries,” says Mr. Bilodeau.

The company has also contributed to the field of cinema and television by participating in the creation of costumes and scenery for numerous productions, including A Night at the Museum, Pathfinder, Black Robe, Mummy, and Grey Owl, starring Pierce Brosnan. Once again, the best advertising remains customer satisfaction.
