the last weeks of November

Description

Geordie's 40th anniversary, a tribute to Aznavour and Cohen, ELAN's Schmoozer and more...

By Byron Toben

As the classic song September Song relates, "Oh, the days dwindle down to a precious few – September, November..." we remember a fall season that was truly pas comme les autres with all the pandemic dislocations.

I really miss the annual November Atwater Library Cocktail Fundraiser (where the Dave Turner Jazz Trio was a regular feature). Listen to September Song at the end of this preview.

Even though live theatre and cinema remain on hiatus, there are some outstanding choices on the Internet.

New York's Irish Repertory Theatre, which featured a gripping O'Neill Long Day's Journey Into Night earlier this month, follows up with Bill Irwin's acclaimed solo show On Beckett / In Screen.

At 5 pm, ELAN (English Language Arts Network) holds its periodic "Schmooser" meet-up, this time digitally. I'm still not sure if en français, it is Le or La Schmooser, but I have often attended and it's great fun to keep an eye upon what's happening in Anglo Quebec music, dance, art, theatre and film.

By the way, ELAN's founder and director Guy Rodgers is stepping down soon, and they are searching for a replacement. Big shoes to fill, but qualified applicants should check out the details at quebec-elan.org/Executive-Director-Job-offer.pdf

From 11 am to 3 pm, Geordie Theatre, created in 1980 by Elsa Bolam, celebrates its 40th Anniversary. Current Artistic Director Mike Payette invites all to its digital celebration from its new home in Montréal's Little Italy district.

To close, here is the promised music video of September Song. The music was created in 1938 by Kurt Weill with lyrics by Maxwell Anderson – two great theatre figures. Covered by many famous singers, here is one by Frank Sinatra in 1965.
